Train links to Exmouth:

Mainline from (example Paddington Station in London) to Exeter St David's or Exeter Central. There is a local service to Exmouth along the river with great views (25 minute journey) and the rest of the U.K. This is an important link for Exmouth and villages to Exeter, please support it, it also saves trying to park in Exeter on a day trip from Exmouth, fantastic views of the Exe Estuary Great views at sunset.

There is a very good rail network from which you can reach Exeter and then the local link to Exmouth. Trains from London Paddington main line station are fast and frequent over the 2 routes to Exeter (One via Bristol and the beautiful Roman town of Bath, but you don't have to change). The other route has also much lovely scenery, lots of it with running next to a canal, with its fishermen and long boats. Look out for the White horse cut into the rolling hills. You can connect with a network of local and cross-country routes, many of which are particularly scenic and an excellent way to see more of the countryside.

From Heathrow Airport

it is an easy route with the Motorway M4 via to near Bristol where you change Motorways to the M5 all the way to nearby Exeter. From the Airport is a half hour coach service to Reading, west of London (it saves having to go into London). As entering the coach you pay, cash or Credit cards, Am.Ex also! You can make it very easy and get one ticket for the coach AND the train all the way to Exmouth. There is a supplement of about £10 for either journey made on a FRIDAY. For foreign visitors, if you plan to make several rail journeys, ask about the BritRail Pass at British Rail Offices or travel agents before you leave, since it is not available in Britain. Otherwise tickets can be bought at any station where you can ask about the many reduced price ticket deals. Gatwick Airport has a 30 min. journey to London Victoria Station, where you can get a Underground train (known as the Tube) to Paddington Station where the Trains to Exeter start.

By coach or bus

By Bus The National Express coach system covers most of the U.K. and has a main interchange coach station at Exeter There is a frequent local bus service (Stagecoach) between Exeter and Exmouth..

From Heathrow Airport is a half hour coach service to Reading, west of London (it saves having to go into London to Victoria Coach Station). As entering the coach you pay, cash or Credit cards, Am.Ex also! You can make it very easy and get one ticket for the coach AND the train all the way to Exmouth.
