DURING AND AFTER PREGNANCY

In these phases it is important to concentrate on nourishing the skin to ensure it remains soft, supple and elastic and to avoid stretch marks. Due to the stretching of the skin, it can also feel very itchy and tight, and therefore it is best to deeply nourish it to offer a sense of relief and comfort.

We also need to take care of facial skin. Sebum reduces, collagen production is inhibited, and perspiration increases, creating greater skin fragility and dehydration. The legs are also under a lot of strain due to the compressed circulation and are subject to fluid retention and especially swelling of the ankles.

Muscular aches and pains are frequent due to the changes in the body's structure so a relaxing massage can provide welcome relief.
